Scoping the Private Investigators Market

David Farrow & Julie Bower 28th April 2010

Objectives

- Scope out the size and shape of the Private Investigation market so that the SIA has an estimate of the number of licenses that are likely to be applied for and issued
- Analysis of:
 - How many firms and companies are operating in this space
 - How many individuals are operating in this space
 - How many employees are there in total
 - What is the geographical and regional breakdown
 - Who are the major players
- Size the market of licensable activities
- Create up to date database
- Establish where investigators are advertising

Methodology

- To develop our database of investigators, we searched the databases below:
 - Association of British Investigators
 - Institute of Professional Investigators
 - World Association of Professional Investigators
 - World Investigators Network
 - World Association of Detectives
 - National Association of Professional Process Servers
 - Yellow Pages
 - Touch Local
 - Find A Detective
 - Search 4 a Private Investigator
 - British Agents
 - United Kingdom Private Investigators Network
 - World Investigator's Network
 - British Services
- Additionally, we looked at classified adverts in a selection of local newspapers from the South East
- This list was cross checked against the main SIA database provided, to assess the degree of overlap
- Our approach and calculations were also informed by interviews with trade associations: the ABI and IPI. The Varsity Publication were also consulted
- It was intended to conduct short interviews with a sample of Private Investigator (PI) firms found, but these were unable to be carried out due to restrictions in the purdah period

The Database

- For each organisation in our database we captured the name of their organisation, any telephone and address details available, website address, number of offices, and the region they were in
- Each entry was then cross checked against the main SIA database of over 1700 entries to understand the degree of overlap

Company name	 website	contact phone	numbe Head office location	Region
00 Investigations	www.00-investigations.co.uk	01926 886625 07767 067003	Leamington Spa	West Midlands
007 Agents		07970 045188	9 New Hall Lane, , Preston, PR1 5NU	North West
007 Detective Agency		07010 714 714	120 Wilton Road Victoria, London SW1∨1JZ	London
007 Detectives		07017 410 076	Bristol, Avon	South West
1 Call Detective Investigation		0844 587 0417	15 Finchley Lane Hendon London NW4 1BN	London
14 Almsford Oval			Harrogate North Yorkshire HG2 8ET England	Yorkshire and Humbe
1st Action Investigations		0121 240 1925/ 0121 448 5282	8 Alleyne House Birmingham, West Midlands B24 8EL	West Midlands
1st Action Services		0121 240 1925	Birmingham	West Midlands
1st Call Detective		07017758235	3 Alfriston Berrylands Road, Surbiton, KT5 8RB	South East
1st Call Detective		07017758304	1 Cavendish Parade, Bath Road, Hounslow, TW4 7DJ	South East
1st Call Detective		07017758292	142 Clock Tower Road, Isleworth, TW7 6DT	South East
1st Call Detective		07010 025122	2-8 James Street, Liverpool, L2 7PQ	North West
1 1st Call Detectives		07010 025121	Bridge House, 1-2 Riverside Drive, Aberdeen, AB11 7LH	Scotland
5 1st Call Investigations	http://www.1stcallprivateinve	stig01772 780147	PO Box 655, Preston, Lancashire PR 3XZ	North West
1st Call Private Detectives	http://www.tataallavissatadata		White Rose House, 28a, York Place,	North Cost

The scope of the Private Investigation market

- The total number of Private Investigation Organisations we found is 2766. Including multiple offices, this total is 2986
- Of these, 356 were also on the smaller supplied SIA database
- We have used this to size the market based on probable, possible and potential future assessment of the number of investigators each organisation hires

Probable = 1-2	$1.5 \times 2986 = 4479$
Possible = 3-4	3.5 x 2986 = 10,451
Potential = 5-6	5.5 x 2986 = 16,423

This gives us a market size ranging from 4400 to 17,000

Caveats

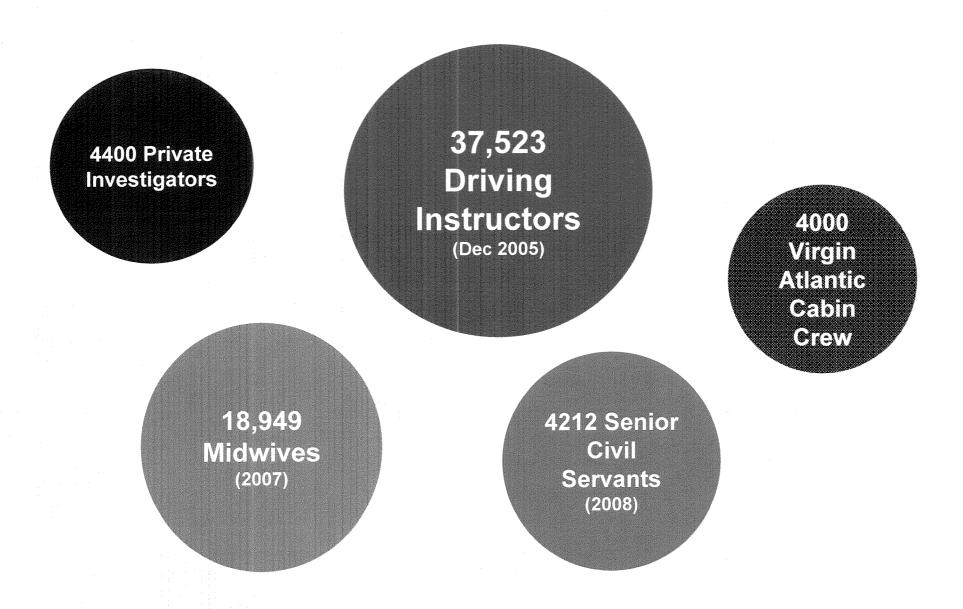

Our sizing may be underestimating the market...

- What we found isn't necessarily comprehensive we could have continued searching and expanding the database
- There may be 'under the radar' PIs who aren't searchable in public domain.
 However, the trade associations estimate this to be a very small number
- There was limited overlap with the main SIA database and the one we created. However, within the SIA database there appeared to be many organisations with multiple listings:
 - One phone number has 474 separate organisation listings, and one with 155
 - 10 individuals names are listed for 262 organisations

Our sizing may be overestimating the market...

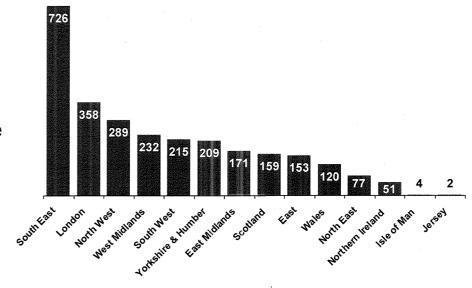

- People dip in and out may only do e.g. 1 investigation a year, so wouldn't necessarily go ahead with licensing...
- One organisation may have multiple listings
- There may be PIs who do investigative work for multiple organisations

The size of the PI market in context...

The shape/composition of the market

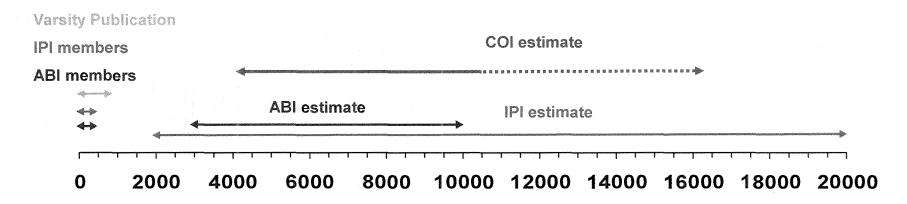

- The bulk of the Private Investigation organisations we found were in London and the South East (39%)
- Other hubs for PIs tend to be urban centres including Manchester and Birmingham
- Out of all the local papers in London and the South East reviewed, only one PI advertisement was found. This demonstrates that advertisement is primarily online or, as in the example of yell.com, available in paper and online versions
- The prevalence of online advertising means that many online listings may be out of date

Number of organisations in our database by region. Those with multiple offices within a region are only counted once

Trade Associations & Market Size

- The ABI is the largest PI trade association. It has 450 members according to the ABI president. This number is 555 in their online directory, which may be due to some members who are listed under multiple addresses
- The IPI is the second largest. It has 380-400 members according to the IPI Secretary General. When interviewed, the IPI Secretary General quoted the ABI membership to be far higher than it is at 800+ members
- WAPI is the third largest organisation with 86 members
- It is common for companies to be members of more than one or all of these trade associations at once
- The Varsity Publication is the definitive PI paper directory. However this source has become much less used in the past ten years because of the internet. This seems to be confirmed by the Varsity Publication's Managing Editor who says only 1000 PI individual offices are open. However, there is a cost involved in being listed in the Varsity Publication and it may be that interest associated with this format is shrinking
- The ABI estimates the total market of PIs to be between 3000 -10,000, while the IPI estimate it to be between 2,000 20,000

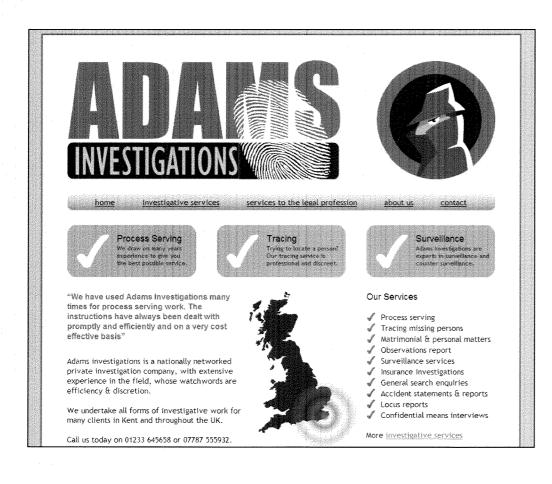

Market movements & patterns

- It is believed by ABI, IPI and Varsity Publication that the number of PIs is fairly static but shrinking. Various reasons are cited for this, including a lack of work, organisations slimming down, investigators retiring and businesses merging or folding
- Recession is usually a boom time for PIs because of foreclosures. However this recession has seen less of this activity than the preceding one did
- Cross-agency help is heavily relied upon. Both trade associations interviewed believe that the claims of small companies to have nationwide coverage and access to multiple branches and operatives amounts to nothing more than noise
- Accreditation to the ABI and IPI is of an individual, not of a company. However, this is often not respected by their members. Their membership is considerably smaller than the actual market size not only because the vast majority are unaccredited but because in an individual company, often only the principal is accredited
- The ABI have devised ways of growing the prestige of being an association member.
 This includes having negotiated exclusive access to the DVLA electronic database for their members. The ABI also consistently works to win the confidence of the police and mutually aid investigations in that way. Membership to the ABI thus represents more privileges and business potential than only a credibility check
- Both the ABI and IPI believe that there are a minimal number of investigators coming in from abroad

Private Investigation Activities

- The president of the ABI estimates that there are up to 100 different kinds of PI activity
- The main areas of investigation are due diligence, surveillance and countersurveillance, people tracing, process serving, debt recovery, background checks, status reports, credit checks, corporate and fraud investigations and security consultancy.
- A high proportion of PI work is for corporate rather than private clients
- Surveillance of teenagers is a growing market particularly in Asian communities
- A lot of PIs have their own website, sometimes disclosing the company address(es) and / or the company's main investigator

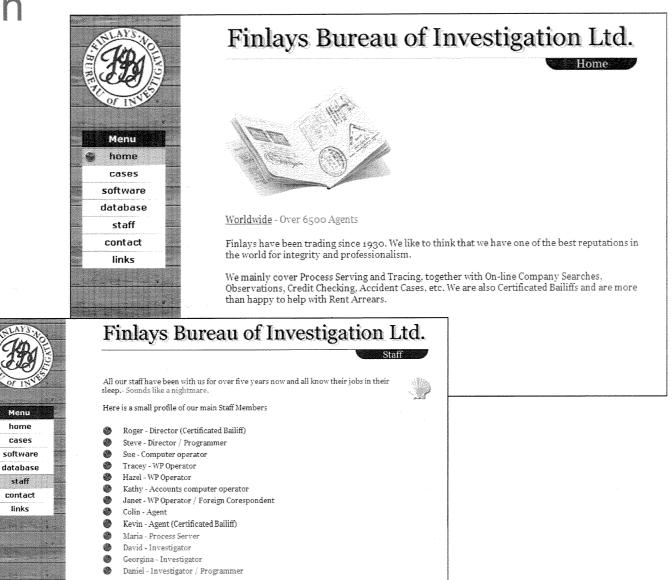

Case Studies – Adams Investigations

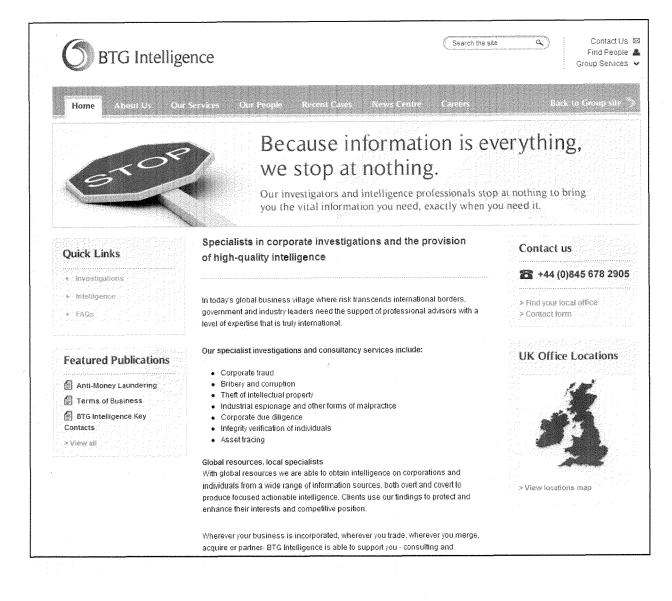

- •Specialist in surveillance
- •Offer investigative services to individuals and the legal profession
- Based in Ashford no apparent other offices
- Member of ABI

Case Studies – Finlays Bureau of Investigation

- Based in London
- •Claim to have 1600 agents nationwide and is building a searchable database of these
- •Site lists 13 staff members many of whom are not investigators but may carry out licensable activities

Case Studies – BTG Intelligence

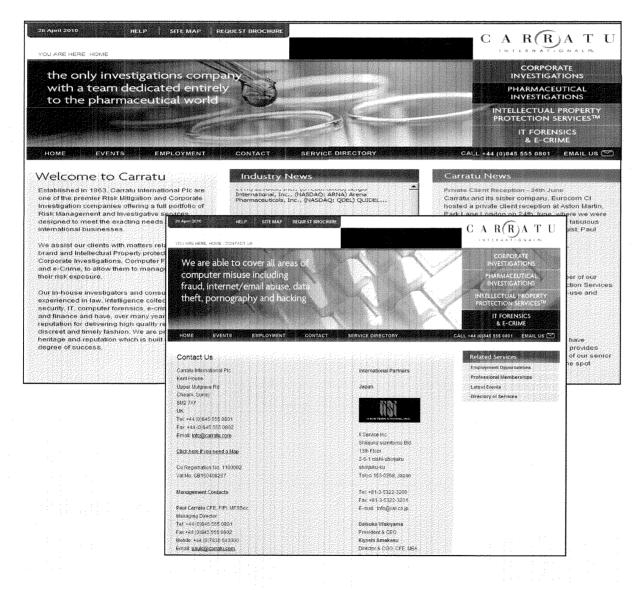

- Based in Manchester
- •47 UK office locations
- •The Begbies
 Traynor group conducts corporate investigations only
- •Recent work includes covert surveillance on a Managing Director resulting from board level concerns he was breaching his fiduciary duties

Case Studies - Kroll

- •4 UK offices but mainly based in the US. 55 offices in 27 countries
- Unaccredited to any UK trade association
- •Kroll has approximately 3000 employees worldwide, including over 300 consultants in their Investigations, Financial Advisory & Intelligence practice, but the bulk of these are likely to be in the US
- •Huge, multinational and corporate PI firm whose functions have expanded over 30 years of practice into consultancy and general risk mitigation
- •Claims it has governments and celebrities as part of its client base and offers a 24 hour international service

Case Studies - Carratu

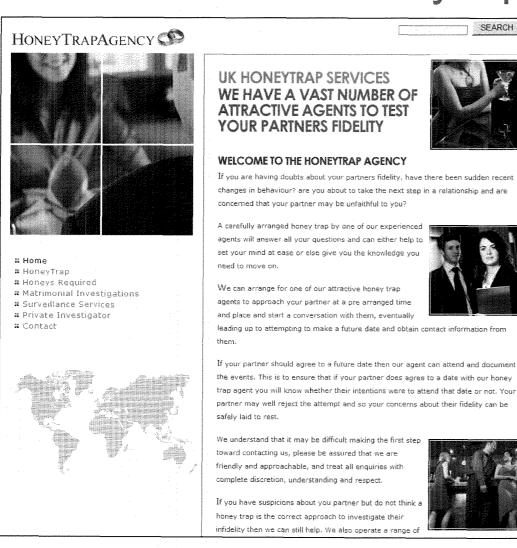

- Based in Surrey
- •Managing Director is Paul Carratu. Company active since 1963.
- •Member of a large number of associations including:
- •IPI which the website incorrectly claims is the largest member organisation of its kind in the UK
- The Association of Certified Fraud Examiners (ACFE)
- The World Association of Detectives (WAD)
- Marques, the Association of European Trade Mark Owners
- •The Forensic Science Society

Case Studies - Jack Russell

- •A freephone service with no names supplied
- Opened a new office in Manchester in October 2009
- •Claims to have a network of UK offices
- •Claims to have a long track record with 25 years of professional debt recovery experience

Case Studies – Honeytrap Agency

- Contact address is in Worcestershire
- 'A number' of Male and Female investigators offering:
- •Finding Missing Persons
- Covert Surveillance Operations
- Honey Trap Assignments
- Vehicle Tracking Systems [GPS]
- Prenuptial Investigations
- Background Reports
- Process Serving

Views on licensing

- Interviews with the ABI and IPI yielded varied opinions on licensing
- Both trade associations are in favour of licensing to rein in unscrupulous operators, but they stand to benefit if licensing does not go ahead as membership of their organisations remains the only available accreditation
- Private Investigation is often picked up in middle age as a second career by retired police officers. Those who carry out the occasional investigation out of interest or for pin money are likely to be discouraged by the introduction of licensing
- Pls are most often self employed and not used to participating in CPD and training.
 Big egos might also prevent these Pls from operating as a licensed Pl as the requirements may not sit well with them
- The question of who in the workplace should be licensed has been raised by one trade association. Every person in a PI office is likely to handle investigative work and sensitive data on some level, even if they are not an investigator
- There is frustration among PIs and the trade associations at the lack of resolution on licensing and a feeling that this process has dragged on and is losing credibility. One expert said that a no-competency qualification for a license would answer the question of how many PIs there are at once, but commented that it seems too late for that now
- Several larger PI websites post updates and views on licensing plans

Views on licensing – PI Franchises or ask for a "Call Back"

Of course the "private investigation" business is a very wide ranging business from those who and specialist forensic and anti-espionage trades. Not to mention those who are likely to be investigation" business is just too big an area for a simple licence to cover. Many areas are all ready covered of course by the all invading Data Protection Act and Consumer Credit Licence.

Sitting these beside are the Office of Fair Trading and Information Commissioners Office who keep a closer eye on the "private investigation" business than most others ----- it seems to me.

brought in such as debt counsellors, and asset recovery agents. The whole "private sit and watch, through process servers (who are in effect postmen), through to data researchers

Opinion varies from those who feel that Private Investigation is too big an area for licenses to cover and that there is already much regulation in place, and those who are positive about regulation and licensing from the SIA

Bluemoon Agencies:

The position so far

Thw Security Industry Authority (SIA) are developing the approach to the licensing of private investigation activities. The Security Industry Authority is the organisation responsible for regulating the private security industry.

During 2005 and 2006 they consulted extensively with individuals and representatives working within private investigation on the possible approaches for licensing.

The options for licensing were presented by the Home Office in a partial Regulatory Impact Assessment in August 2007. Individuals and organisations with an interest in this sector had an opportunity to respond with their comments. The responses to the consultation were published by the Home Office in May 2008.

Following the Home Office's recommendation to introduce competency-based licensing, an interim version of the Impact Assessment confirming the intention to develop the regulation was published in September 2008.

An announcement is expected by April 2009 on the licensing criteria and licensing timetable.

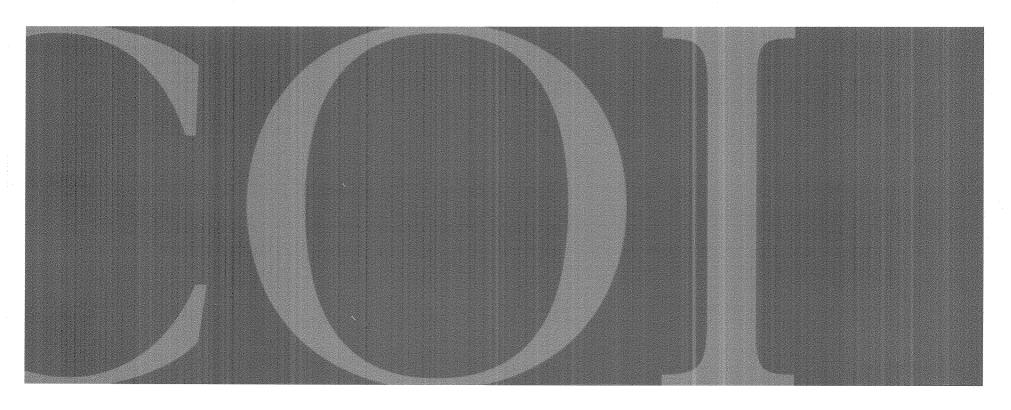

Regulation will be a good thing in the long term. It will eventually put the Sector on the road to become a profession and capture all Operatives undertaking licensable activities, regardless of job title.

Conclusions

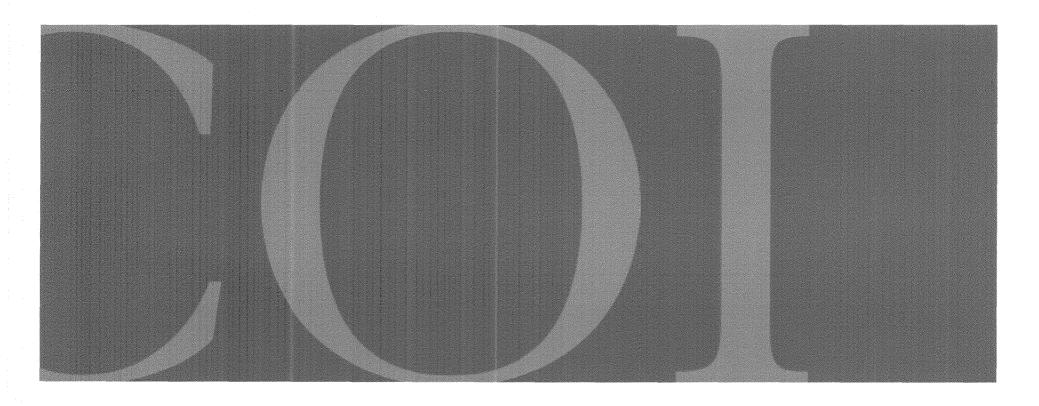

- The estimated size of the private investigation market is around 4000-6000 investigators
- However, it will always be difficult to have an exact figure due to the fluctuating nature of the market and the staffing claims private investigators make
- There is stretch potential in the market with it seemingly likely that the market will grow if the economy worsens as credit collection services are central to the sector
- The PI market is chaotic, randomised and diffuse with contact information often being historic and obsolete, increasing the difficulty of gaining an accurate picture of the market

Thank You

David Farrow & Julie Bower 28th April 2010

Appendix

Local Newspapers – South East

- The following publications from w/c 5th April were reviewed for classified advertisements for private investigators:
 - Metro
 - Farnham Herald
 - Lewisham & Catford News Shopper
 - Kilburn Times
 - Hounslow Brentford Times
 - Newham Recorder
 - Londra London Turkish Gazette
 - The Croydon Borough Post
 - The Medway Messenger
 - Fulham & Hammersmith Chronicle
 - The Portsmouth News
 - Oxford Mail
 - Hampshire Chronicle